TO EMBARGOED : 30TH OCTOBER 11:23 AM UK TIME

MEET THE BRAND CUT-ING THEIR WAY TO THE TOP.

In 2021, the announcement was made that CUT was launching. What is CUT you ask? A fresh denim brand which is revolutionising the industry. With charity, community and sustainability at the heart of their brand; CUT has partnered with numerous organisations with one common goal; to battle the rising normality of knife crime throughout the UK with one pair of jeans at a time. Through partnering with denim manufacturer, Blackhorse Lane Ateliers, Knife Safe and Waltham Forests local government, LBWF work together to gather the knives of our very own streets to repurpose them into buttons and rivets for beautifully- crafted jeans that will last you a lifetime. Created and nurtured in East London, these jeans are designed for purpose. To be worn with purpose.

CUT uses the likes of British rapper and Mercury Prize winner, Santan Dave and fashion blogger, MelissasWardrobe who coined the hashtag, #MMDI, as the faces of this campaign. Dave even wrote a new song for the launch as he teases a sneak-peek on his Instagram. Every purchase you make with CUT they pledge to shape youth's futures as they gain experience within the industry by being able to participate in co-creation workshops and having an involvement within the production of the jeans. The brand is and has the power to change lives.

Upon their launch CUT has three-part series, - Countdown to CUT; A Time for Change. which is now available on Instagram TV. The series details families and individuals who have been affected by knife crime with guest stars appearing in each episode. An episode has been released weekly for the last three weeks up until the launch, 9th October 2021. The producer behind the series is Mariam Mohammed who has worked on a recent documentary with BBC: Defending Digga D. An empowering brand ready to tackle the other brands at a fight for activism and social change. You do not want to miss it. The collection will be live on their website 9th October 2021 at 8PM (BST).
